THE SENIOR CLASS OF PROVISO TOWNSHIP HIGH SCHOOL
MAYWOOD . . . ILLINOIS

Foreword

Throughout the world, people of all ages are longing to attain peace, that peace for which so many have fought and died. Because, as youth, our heritage will be the maintenance and promotion of friendly relations among nations, we of the staff have based the 1947 Provi on the theme "Education for Peace."

Every course which we study in school provides us with the opportunity to prepare ourselves for a world built upon the foundations of peace and good will toward men.

The social sciences enable us to understand better the causes of many of the present world disagreements; thus, by studying history and related subjects, we become more tolerant of foreign ideas and more willing to co-operate with other nations for peace.

Through the knowledge of a foreign language, we become acquainted with the common heritage of a people; therefore, we are able to understand better their way of life. Moreover, by studying a language, we prepare ourselves to participate in the peaceful interchange of ideas among the nations of our world.

We regard science as the very basis of our modern life; indeed, there is not a single phase of daily living which is not affected by the application of some scientific principle. During the war we made great advances in science. If we would but utilize these discoveries for the benefit of mankind, we would greatly enhance the chance for peace.

Art, music, and literature represent the most perfect part of a nation's culture. Man has always expressed his emotions—passionate love, bitter hate, overwhelming joy, heartbreaking sorrow—through the universal language of the fine arts. Here, in the great works of the masters, even those of us who do not have unusual creative power can find inspiration and stimulation.

We find a symbol of peace in homemaking, for nothing could be more in accord with harmonious and happy living than family life. Well-trained children and devoted parents are indicative of a normal United States.

Commerce and industry form the basis for business relationships among interdependent countries everywhere. Manufactured goods are traded by industrial nations for raw materials from agrarian countries, with resulting economic stability. This free flow of goods and services insures world-wide prosperity, and consequently, peace.

Though most courses tend to build alert minds, the purpose of physical education is, in addition, to form strong bodies; for weak people constitute a weak nation. Through competitive games, we also acquire the sportsmanship and sense of fair play so important to peace. The strength of a country is measured not only by material wealth, but also by the physical strength and vigor of its people.

The Provi staff has emphasized the beauty of nature throughout this annual, for we believe that in nature one can find the true meaning of peace. Tranquillity, relaxation, and calmness are among the gifts which Mother Nature bestows upon us. We of this locality are especially fortunate because the treasure chest of nature is indeed bountiful here. The sparkling snow and fragrant evergreens of winter; the verdant forest preserves, rippling brooks, and sweet flowers of summer; the freshness of spring and the coloring of autumn; all of these, and more, arouse in an observing person an appreciation of nature's beauty.

In the world of tomorrow, we may do well to blend intelligence, developed through education, with the serenity which characterizes nature. The resulting co-operation with fellow men would make possible our goal—a peace which reigns supreme.

SCHOOL

*Friends teach laughter,
Lifting down the light-hearted wind.
This is the golden instant,
The never-to-return moment:
Now to taste the wild-sweet tang of spring;
Now to feel with young fingers
The nascent grass and blossoms,
The pulsating heart of the earth;
Now to become as a hollow reed
That holds harmonic subtleties
Of life attuned to vibrant joy;
Now to search the sky with eager eyes
For inspiration like the soaring flight of birds
Close to the radiant sun;
Now to pledge faith to ideals,
Simple as unstudied laughter,
Dauntless as the willful wind.*

BOARD OF EDUCATION...supervises improvements

The Board of Education, comprised of worthy community men, is one of the staunch pillars of Proviso. All of the projects to improve our school, which include those of classroom facilities, building and grounds maintenance, financial planning, determinations of additions, and general improvement, are under the supervision of these responsible men. They formulate the policies of the school and are one of the important reasons for the high place Proviso maintains among other institutions of learning.

B. Leslie Allen, president for 1946-47, is serving his fifteenth year on the Board. He has also held the position of secretary. He is a resident of Melrose Park.

Fred E. Meyer of Forest Park is holding the responsibility of secretary for 1946-47. He has also held office as president in the course of his five years' service on the Board.

Harry W. Ewert of Maywood has, in the past, been both president and secretary. This is his fourteenth year of membership.

William A. Gee, resident of Maywood, was president for 1945-46. Previously, he served a term as secretary. He is now completing his sixth year as a Board member.

John M. Newcomer has rendered service during his fifteen years of membership as both president and secretary. He, too, is a resident of Maywood.

Louis Ancel has been attorney for the Board for eight years. He also resides in Maywood.

PROVISO'S SUPERINTENDENT

Dr. Earl R. Sifert has guided the destiny of Proviso with a skilled hand for eleven years. His dignified appearance and kindly manner mark him as an example of gracious living respected by all Provisoites. Well-known to students and faculty are his "special occasion" messages which are remembered for their truth and sincerity. Much of his time is spent doing public relations work to keep Proviso in the vanguard of educational progress.

Miss Marjorie Hurst is Dr. Sifert's personal secretary. Scheduling his appointments, and handling his correspondence concerning school business are a few of her many tasks.

Business and Main Office Staffs

The Business Office, in addition to being the center of all money matters of the school, is also the purchasing agent of supplies and equipment needed in all departments. Payrolls are prepared, streetcar tickets are sold, and money is deposited for numerous organizations in the Business Office. Business relating to the Board of Education is taken care of by a staff consisting of Mrs. Hattie Haupt and her assistants, Gertrude Bathje and Leona Palka.

BUSINESS OFFICE STAFF

Miss Leona Palka, Mrs. Hattie Haupt, and Miss Gertrude Bathje pore over ledgers.

MAIN OFFICE STAFF

(Standing) Mrs. Genevieve Most, Mrs. L. Spires, and Mrs. Irma Eisenmann; and (seated) Mrs. Gladys Thelin and Mrs. Evelyn Pyle, carry on their daily work.

Mrs. Johnson prepares to fill a teacher's order for textbooks.

Five staff members assist Mr. Taggart and Miss Carroll in the Main Office. Their work includes operating the school switchboard, tabulating attendance, and doing the vast amount of clerical work connected with enrollment.

The Book Room has been under the capable management of Mrs. Emma Johnson for the past three years. Here she keeps accurate records of all incoming and outgoing books, sells workbooks, and supplies teachers with books when needed. Altogether, she has contact with approximately 40,000 or more volumes.

The Main Office

Assistant Superintendent C. C. Taggart, who is seldom without a record or file in his hand, heads the office force with a genuine smile and a ready helping hand for all. It is he who is responsible for the school program, which assigns every student to a special place for every hour of the day. Eighth grade pupils welcome his advice when preparing their high school enrollment.

Every Proviso student's statistical record and class program is housed in the Main Office. Hub of the administration, it is managed by Ruth Williams, Katherine Harrison, Nancy Fletcher, Phoebe Brown, Rose Bernhardt, and Jeanne Burren, who handle transfers, department changes, and personnel records.

Miss Mary Carroll, registrar, is in charge of all permanent records of the school. She also heads the clerical staff which assists Mr. Taggart.

Miss Moore, Mr. Hinds, Mr. Carr, Miss Beck, Miss Hayward, and Mr. Dillner gather before a cheery blaze.

COUNSELORS...for personal guidance

COUNSELORS

Do boys and girls attending Proviso have problems and obstacles facing them? Indeed they do! Whenever students feel the need of personal guidance, they are privileged to seek the advice of their class counselor. These counselors are prepared to give kind, helpful, and well-founded advice. All freshmen and sophomores are divided into regular class groups for counsel and discussion.

H. E. Carr counsels the freshman boys; Miss Virginia Hayward advises the girls. The sophomore counselors are O. O. Dillner and Miss Ruth Beck. J. W. Hinds is the junior and senior boys' counselor; Miss Lois Moore is the counselor for junior and senior girls. All are well-qualified for their work, having received masters' degrees at Northwestern University.

SCHOOL NURSE

Splitting headaches, sprained fingers, sore toes, and aching backs—these, and more, are the ailments of Proviso students for which Miss Helen Robinson, the school nurse, gives treatment.

Miss Robinson has been at Proviso for fifteen years. Among her duties are helping Dr. Morris Buyer with the annual physical examinations and keeping health records of all students.

The school nurse has a big job curing aches and pains, but she's always prepared with her band-aids, iodine, aspirin, and a bright quip or two.

COMMITTEES...faculty problem-tacklers

The Curriculum Committee acts as the co-ordinating body for all curricular problems of the school. Under the leadership of the chairman, Miss Mary Sigworth, the committee meets weekly to discuss and solve problems that may arise in any of the school curricula.

The Advisory Committee, under the direction of E. R. Sifert, meets every two weeks to discuss and evaluate plans suggested by faculty members. Each year a new member is appointed to the group and one is dropped; this procedure insures an experienced committee.

Seated: Miss Dorothea Western, Miss Genevieve Krebs, Miss Helen Harris, Miss Lois Robinson.

The Student Council Advisory Committee, of which Miss Dorothy Thompson is general chairman, consists of sixteen faculty members. These members are assigned to different Student Council committees where they supervise the activities of the groups. As long as the students' actions are approved by the authorities and are in agreement with the constitution, the advisors remain inactive. Only when matters need faculty attention do they actually take part in discussions. The Advisory Committee is always willing and eager to aid the Student Council in attaining these aims: to help raise student morale, to assist with school regulations, and to render service.

The Professional Development Committee, headed by Martin M. Finstad, prepares and presents programs which keep the faculty informed about educational trends and developments, and brings controversial questions in school routine before the faculty for discussion.

The seven faculty members of the committee meet once each month, or as often as necessary when programs are being prepared. They are kept busy determining the material for presentation at professional faculty meetings, arranging for university field courses and lecturers, and securing selected printed matter of current information for faculty distribution.

Some of the speakers of the past year who told of their work during the war, were Richard Daniels, English; Miss Marie Baldridge, English; and Miss Dorothea Western, librarian.

EDUCATION WEEK... school meets community

In recognition of the vital part which intelligent education must play in harnessing the terrific force of atomic energy to produce the tools of peace, the general theme of American Education Week, November 10-16, 1946, was "Education for the Atomic Age." The theme thus emphasized the fact that schools such as Proviso are, in reality, "Operation Crossroads"; for, in the minds of us students who will be tomorrow's citizens is decided the fate of this chaotic world.

LIBRARY . . . for reading and research

Since man must have a thorough knowledge of the world about him before he is truly educated for peace, no effort has been spared to build a collection of books in the Proviso library which will increase the student's information. How can we serve all mankind better than to offer free books and free knowledge to a free man's mind?

Library pages await instruction for day's work.

Miss Western, head librarian, examines an interesting book.

All's peaceful and quiet in the literary atmosphere.

Mrs. Jacobs points out some of the new books.

Miss Williams and Miss DeWolf help students in their selection of books.

SPEECH . . . for poised self-expression

Ability in self-expression, always necessary in conveying our thoughts clearly to others, is increasingly important in our modern world. As swift transportation and communication combine to squeeze the earth until the farthest outposts are neighbors, we need more than ever to be capable of intelligent discussion about international and domestic issues. Discussion leads to wide knowledge of political, economic, and social conditions in the world; greater knowledge, pushing away ignorance, leads to co-operation.

We Americans have always prided ourselves on our right of free speech. To help the student make the most of this privilege, the Proviso Speech Department shows him how to express his views intelligently. It aims to give students poise for participation in clubs, discussions, and forums—a general preparation for self-expression in everyday life. The department also offers more specialized work. If a student has interest in radio and the theater, he can study the fundamentals of these fields. If he enjoys a good argument, he can engage in the lively, thought-generating art of public discussion.

In the future, the world hopes to settle disputes with words instead of wars. Proviso is helping its young people to prepare for confident answers to the important and frequent question, "What's your opinion?"

"When we stood up there, we felt about so high."

Now comes a pause for the commercial.

"Madame Chairman, I disagree with that statement."

Hopeful actors and speakers practice before the critical eyes of their classmates

Mr. C. Moore, Miss Mary Eileen Serak, Mr. M. W. Immel, Miss Cecil Stark, Miss Emily Reid, and Mr. A. E. Judd are absorbed in portraits of actors.

A one semester course, dramatics offers the student a fundamental knowledge of the field of the drama. Through the study of theater techniques and their practical application in the production, acting, and staging of plays, an appreciation of the drama is encouraged and developed. A major part of the course consists of the cultivation of such habits as poise, clear articulation, and proper breath and voice production, so necessary to would-be actors. To those who respond to the summons of grease paint and script, dramatics is an indispensable course.

Classes sometimes divide into small informal clusters for discussion

Mr. A. R. Volk passes out books to Miss Violet Hogan, Mr. R. Daniels, Miss Ellendore Lampton, Miss Helen Harris, Miss Ruth Rehr, Miss Mary Eileen Serak, Miss Marie Baldrige and Miss Florence I. Otis.

Mr. R. Gerfen, Miss Alice Terdina, Miss Cecil Stark, Miss Grace Shakin, Mr. G. Haddock, Mrs. Louise Butler, Miss Ruth Neal, and Miss Helen Grant consider additions to a class library.

(Standing) Miss Emily Reid, Miss Mary E. Joyner, Mr. A. E. Judd, Miss Florence Scott, and Miss Anna Harman; (seated) Miss Grace Reininga, Miss Madlynne Appa, Miss Eleanor Lonek, and Miss Cleora Fancher discuss records for classes.

ENGLISH... enriching life with literature

The great men of world literature have always loved life and its manifestations in nature with an especial vigor. They have seen beauty glowing white hot in the hearts of stars; felt the pulsation of the universe in the restless wind; heard the symphonic rhythm of the rain; tasted adventure with the tangy sea spray. Through the study of literature—the vividly recorded experiences of great writers—we come to a more vital appreciation of the world in which we live.

We cannot all express with delicate accuracy the ephemeral emotions which come to life in us. But we can observe the insignificant things about us—colored pebbles and symmetrical snowflakes—and in the knowledge of their exquisite perfection enlarge our whole experience in living. Even as writers must record the beauty they find, he who thus comes to a richer enjoyment of life will want to share it with others. We have an opportunity in the study of English to develop even a small skill in the communication to one another of the truth and beauty we find about us. Thus, as a perception of this beauty lends us nobility of spirit, so, by communicating but a little of this fervid idealism to others, we contribute to the eternal glory of mankind.

—and this is where Shakespeare's plays were produced.

The classroom library yields some informative books.

It looks good—let's start packing!

LANGUAGE...revealing foreign customs

He who is capable of speaking intelligently with his foreign neighbors can better co-operate with them. Through the Language Department of Proviso, many students are preparing to take their places as tomorrow's citizens by learning the languages and customs of their co-workers in peace.

The French classes have "adopted" a French war orphan to whom they send clothes and food regularly. This relationship, together with the exchange of letters with young people of France, establishes a common bond with our foreign neighbors and gives the student a clearer understanding of the problems existing in Europe during this period of reconstruction.

In accordance with the "good neighbor" policy, Pan-American Day is celebrated annually with the Spanish classes participating in appropriate programs. Through these projects, the students become better acquainted with their Spanish "amigos."

In all language classes, the importance of mastering that particular subject is stressed so that the students will realize the necessity for a mutual agreement with all the peoples of the world.

Just as the natural background of a people is evident in its customs and ceremonies, so the cultural background is evident in its language. The realization and study of these facts destroys the intervening barriers and creates the understanding which is so necessary in a united world.

Members of the French class perfect their pronunciation by listening to records.

Mother Latina and her children—France, Rumania, Spain and Italy—listen to Vergil as he reads of the beauties of nature.

The German students are entertained by puppets which represent Goethe's "Faust."

Souvenir articles from foreign lands vividly illustrate the textbook

The Language Department enjoys a cup of chocolate al fresco in the patio. (Seated) Miss Frances Gospill, Miss Lois Robinson, Miss Margaret Phelan, Miss Gertrude Schlueter; (standing) Miss Viola Scala, Miss Madlynne Appa, Mrs. Bina House.

Every language has its own particular associations. Classical Latin, a model of concise, accurate expression, stands as an example of an ancient language perpetually renewing itself in later, slightly altered forms. French is traditionally the language of diplomacy, its subtleties reminiscent of international intrigue. Scientific treaties are written in forceful, polysyllabic German. The lilting cadences of Italian have made it the language used as lyrics for a wealth of musical literature; Italian phrases also compose the vocabulary of musical terms. Spanish, once the language of Old World aristocrats, today is used in the economic, social, and cultural exchange between North America and her "good neighbors" to the south.

Various books, providing many points of view, restrain prejudice

Let's hope that Mr. Harold Dixon, Miss Willa Jean Gray, Mr. Martin Finstad, Miss Frances Trost, and Mr. Hubert Pitt are not discussing another test for the Social Studies Department.

Debating the merits of a recent publication are (seated) Miss Mary West, Mr. M. M. Wall, and Miss Eleanor Ward; (standing) Mr. S. O. Storby and Mr. E. W. Stubbs.

SOCIAL STUDIES . . . man and his world

Each day the peoples of the world are feeling more need for an understanding of the various forms of government and the habits of other people. The Social Studies Department seeks to develop habits of straight thinking in its students. It is necessary that people be accurate and well-informed in their thinking if they are to remain free.

Nations cannot live by themselves any more than individuals can—they must mingle. In order to do so without conflict, it is necessary that the citizens of one country know about the citizens of other countries—their ideas, customs, and beliefs.

Social studies courses present man's past and present, and suggest his future in relation to his physical environment and his culture.

The history classes are concerned primarily with the past and how the past has affected man's present cultures. Modern life, political science, psychology, economics, and sociology seek to interpret our complex problems, to present possible solutions, and to give a better understanding of why humans behave as they do. Civics, another subject offered in the Social Studies Department, deals with the part which the government and community agencies play in the lives of citizens.

World peace depends on every individual's ability to interpret the problems of the entire world—not only those of his own country.

World History pupils discover that the Greeks and Romans also had a good civilization.

The problem of world peace is a big task for these four girls.

Looking at the shape of the world, physically speaking, are three C.P. History students.

ART . . . encouraging creative work

The generosity of nature around Proviso has truly been appreciated by its art students. They have watched the seasons — changes in expression on the face of the earth — bring their own particular loveliness to all of life. But besides enjoying such natural perfection, Proviso students may view exhibits of the greatest paintings of the world in Chicago's art galleries.

A comprehensive study of all art expressions reveals the underlying principles for all forms to be the same. The interaction of the laws of balance, repetition, and dominance and subordination explain why the appeal of the "Mona Lisa" and that of the Taj Mahal are artistically equal, why the Mexican basket weaver is as much a creator of art as was Michelangelo.

Music is used to encourage free emotional expression in art, thus satisfying the creative urge. But music also utilizes the artist. For Proviso concerts every year, artistic backgrounds are created by students of the Art Department to illustrate particular moments of intense feeling. Hand in hand, the arts lead forward to the cultivation of individuals more sensitively aware of the need for beauty and harmony in the world. Surely he who is artistically aware of life will have that inner peace of mind from which international peace must spring.

Art II students study an important painting by Seurat which belongs to the post-impressionistic group.

The work of commercial art students helps to emphasize with art "Education for the Atomic Age"—slogan for American Education Week.

Stagecraft students originate and build a miniature stage for the opera "Hansel and Gretel."

Beginning artists interpret music by making original abstractions

Miss Wilhelmina Marm, head of the art department, and her colleague, Miss Marion Dodderer, stand beside one of the two magnificent lions that guard the entrance to Chicago's Art Institute.

It is difficult to estimate the service of the art department to the school. In any situation which demands the artistic approach, the Art Department is called upon for advice and assistance. It was a student of the Art Department who designed the distinctive monogram for the choir members' stoles. As an American Education Week project, art students prepared a panel sensitively illustrating the theme "Education for the Atomic Age." The scenery for school plays is prepared by Proviso's artists; their holiday decorations brighten the work-a-day atmosphere of the school. Surely, life at Proviso is greatly enriched by the innumerable services of the Art Department.

Equations and geometric proofs offer a challenge to the alert mind

A study of the sextant in most pleasant surroundings is made by Mr. F. W. Baer, Miss Virginia Terhune, Mr. E. L. Joyner, Miss Lillian Arends, Miss Martha Hildebrandt, and Mr. U. C. Foster.

MATHEMATICS . . . basic in technology

Long before man dreamed of an orderly science of number, form, and reasoning, nature developed in accordance with mathematical patterns. Gradually man discovered the laws set by these patterns and used them to his own advantage.

The simple ratio, the number series which grew out of it, and the geometric form which expressed it were all serviceable tools for man when their use by nature became apparent to him. The beauty of a flower, conforming to geometrical ratio and pattern, brought forth ideas in decoration. The threads of a spider web, falling along the lines of a catenary curve, helped the engineer to realize the possibility of building suspension bridges. The logarithmic spiral found in the snail shell, the pine cone, and the horns of the deer and the goat, was copied in the spiral stairway. The soap bubble and the soap film pointed the way to the study of minimal surfaces, the application of which proved a source of economy to the manufacturer.

At Proviso, the student is given an opportunity to study the fundamentals of these mathematical principles which are so abundantly present in nature. If he fully realizes the application of these principles to man-made things, the student will be more able to contribute his part to the advancement of civilization in a world of peace.

Is this what they mean when they say students go to school to play?

SCIENCE... the principles behind progress

Science is chiefly responsible for the material progress which has taken place at such a dizzying speed in our civilization. A constant crop of new inventions arises to amaze us and to remove the need for some of our labor. Modern science is, in fact, according to many of our leaders, so prolific that it has raced far ahead of the mass of humanity. Exactly how man is going to make his social development catch up with his technical development is a serious problem today. The Science Department aims to give a basic understanding of the principles of science to students so that they can comprehend the workings of scientific applications. Greater popular understanding of science and its relation to society is expected to narrow the gap between technical and social progress.

Most Proviso students take a course in general science. Many go on to study specialized physical sciences, which are a study of the earth and living things. Experiments, which help the student to visualize scientific facts and principles, are an important feature of the science courses.

The study of science in high school, while it can only scratch the surface of the world's immense scientific knowledge, nevertheless does much to prepare the students of today for the scientific wonders of tomorrow.

There's a vacuum here somewhere—but it couldn't be in the heads of these physics students, could it?

COMMERCIAL... previewing business life

Vast numbers of versatile office workers, efficient and accurate, will be needed to balance the books of the world of tomorrow. Thousands of typewriter and calculating machine keys are waiting to be punched, dictaphone machines are in need of trained ears, and letters of great importance are ready to be taken down in shorthand. These jobs never make the headlines, but they keep the nation united and on an even keel. The increased demand for office workers has opened a large field to the ambitious student.

Actual experience in sales technique and business manners is given to the Proviso student. The popular vocational sales course gives seniors a chance to work half a day while still receiving training in this field. After-school sales classes prepare juniors and seniors to qualify for part-time work during the Christmas holidays. The rising need for holiday workers has been satisfied partly through this course.

This year the Stenographic and Commercial Departments have been united. The commercial student has an opportunity to sample all forms of business work before he must choose his own vocation. The peak to strive for in any undertaking is excellence; the Commercial-Stenographic Department steers its students toward this goal.

Will you cut us in on a share, too?

Ready to calculate anything from two plus two to the national debt.

We wonder if the dictaphone makes interesting listening.

HOME ECONOMICS . . . for promising homemakers

Peace springs from a world in harmony, and such harmony originates in the home — the backbone of the nation. Peace in the home will create closer, friendlier relations among men, and thus, the possibility of war will no longer be a reality. This fundamental truth is being carried into the homemaking classes of Proviso and is being stressed increasingly every day.

This year a new feature was added with which Proviso homemaking classes are indeed delighted — the complete transformation of the kitchens into 1955 models. They are now equipped with the newest type stoves, spacious cupboards, large white sinks, an automatic dish-washer, and other conveniences. Besides these innovations, an enlarged, cozy dining room was provided where those tasty dishes can be sampled by the budding cooks of tomorrow.

Once again, the sewing classes climaxed the year by presenting a fashion show before the P.T.A. Several girls proudly modeled their carefully stitched masterpieces which were made and perfected in class.

Through a well-rounded selection of courses, the Home Economics Department prepares the girls who will be the American homemakers of tomorrow. Thus, Proviso generously and enthusiastically gives full support to the need for better, happier homes in the future.

Here is the floor plan for that dream home.

Miss Genevieve Krebs, Miss Charlotte Jackson, Miss Fae Duvall, Miss Wilma Hofert, Miss Pearle Betts, and Miss Marie Oliver find new homemaking ideas in magazines.

Practical and up-to-date training is offered every Proviso girl who is interested in home economics. Through the subjects offered she may learn to make her own clothes, whip up a batch of biscuits, or decide which color scheme she would like to use in her home. The Home Economics Department this year offered foods, clothing, interior decorating, and home management. In the first year, the student is taught the basic fundamentals of the course. If she wishes to take the second year of a particular course, more advanced methods are taught with emphasis on preparation for future years.

Mr. M. B. Goodwin gives a demonstration for Mr. L. S. Bracewell, Mr. J. Bennett, Mr. C. W. Bryan, and Mr. S. Rattenbury, Mr. W. K. Ewing, Mr. L. K. Amsden, and Mr. J. Oklepek.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS . . . practical training

Education and industry have changed together in recent years. When the home was the center of industry, children were needed for home labor; consequently, few people ever attended high school. Later, many young people toiled in the first factories under miserable working conditions; high school was still for a privileged minority. The curriculum then was strictly academic, emphasizing the classics and preparing the sons of the well-to-do for college. But as the use of labor-saving machines spread, a complex curriculum, training students for jobs as well as for college, was developed. Today's high school tries to meet everybody's needs, for now everybody can attend.

Highly specialized training to produce workers skilled in the operation of modern machinery is one of the functions of a high school of today. Proviso is well equipped with up-to-date shops where students can learn a trade. In addition, her Industrial Arts Department offers general courses intended to give both a greater familiarity with many widely used machines and tools and a knowledge of how to use and repair them. Precision drawing is also taught as a preparation for technical work.

Proviso is wisely following the modern plan of practical education for life in a world which is growing ever more industrialized.

Members of a woodworking class build something really useful.

A couple of budding draftsmen work out a problem. Watch that angle carefully!

Precision gear cutting requires a complex machine guided by a careful worker.

MUSIC . . . sound made beautiful and inspiring

Music is beauty, as lucid as dawn-light. It is pathos and profound sorrow with black and purplish-gray notes. It is dancing, flirtatious gaiety — all scarlet and gold. Therefore, musicians are not merely artist-engineers who contrive patterns of notes by playing one sound against another in a deliberate attempt at harmony. Their minds are crucibles that refine multi-metallic passions to a glorious fineness; their souls are distillers of elusive emotions and ideas.

To achieve true greatness, a musician must experience deeply, must believe without reservation in something elemental and yet ideal. Following the relentless drive of their creative urge, musicians have looked to nature for renewed inspiration. Pan, the god of woods and fields, played upon a reed pipe the archaic melodies of Greece. Beethoven, master symphonist, depicted in his "Pastoral Symphony" the peace of country life and the oblivious contentment which a nature lover experiences. Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring," with its discordant crashes and violent harmonies, symbolizes the primordial instincts of man.

As nature has inspired musicians to new glory in artistic expression, so it today offers its inspiration to us, the listeners. Having passed through the crucible of a great mind, the essence of its beauty is given to us in symphony and song.

Let's have sharp harmony—don't be flat!

The windy three blow down the scale.

Now don't start pining for sweet Adeline.

Mr. Tallmadge, Mr. Davis, and Mr. Nelson go over a new score.

Instruments and vocal cords set the keynote for school activities

Music has always been indispensable at Proviso. At banquets, at teas, at formal and informal dances, music has always set the keynote. It would be difficult to imagine Christmas at Proviso without music assemblies and carols sung in the halls, or Easter without special musical programs. What would graduation be without "Pomp and Circumstance," or pep assemblies without "On, Proviso!"?

Music is one of the lustrous facets that make perfect the memory gem of a full, happy life at Proviso. Smartly uniformed members of the band, blue-robed choristers, and orchestra members in professional black and white are among Proviso's most valuable citizens.

Calisthenics put seldom-used muscles into action . . . the aches prove it

Coaches Puplis, Remley, Hagen, Matte, Slimmer, Kassel, Wrobke, and Griep take time out to pose.

The accent is on team play in boys' physical education classes. During their four years of school, boys engage in several competitive sports, including touch football, basketball, volleyball, and baseball. Since the boys are already more or less familiar with the games, only a few periods are spent in explaining the fine points of each sport. The rest of the season is a sort of tournament in which regularly established teams vie for superiority. Instructors act as referees, settling arguments with explanations of rules. The purpose of this team play is to let boys have fun while learning to apply good sportsmanship.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION... boys' activities

Physical and mental development are inseparable; therefore, a healthy body reflects a healthy mind. Physical and mental reflexes work together in every physical activity. The total body coordination necessary for supple movement is comparable to the teamwork between quarterback and squad on the gridiron. The individual, like the team, must be mentally alert if he is to use his physical strength most effectively.

Conversely, the mind does its best work in a strong body; the weakling finds mental concentration more difficult. Physical education produces not only bodily vigor, endurance, grace of movement, and symmetry of body, but also mental vigor, self-confidence, and sound morality. Good sportsmanship, practiced at home and in the business world, as well as in competitive sports, is another important mental development of physical education.

The recent global war revealed that many young Americans were unprepared to face hardships because of the laxness of physical education in this country. Having learned a lesson from the facts exposed by military training, our schools are now stressing the importance of keeping mentally and physically fit.

Proviso's Physical Education Department has developed a constructive program of vigorous athletics, including numerous team sports, competitive activities, and specialized training, to develop physical, mental, and moral fitness.

One for the money, two for the show, three to get ready—hey, wait for us!

Another helping of spinach would do it.

We're bobbing along together.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION... girls' activities

There is little room in our modern world for physical unfitness. In a society where speed is the keynote, those who cannot keep pace are left behind; therefore, a Proviso girl receives physical instruction of a kind that will increase her fitness and zest for everyday living.

Realizing that the practice of team play and sportsmanship is extremely important to keep the world at peace, Proviso offers training for girls in such sports as speedball and baseball. In these courses the girl learns how to lose good-naturedly as well as how to win. She grasps an understanding of the importance of each girl on the team and begins to co-operate rather than dominate.

Furthermore, instruction in country dance, modern dance, and social dance provides the Proviso girl with the background she needs for her social life. She is taught courtesy, poise, and tact in getting along with the opposite sex.

Since skills in first aid, hygiene, and home nursing are also necessary for good living, she studies these subjects and practices the skills with other girls.

Because of this well-balanced schedule, the Proviso girl, whether her career be social service, teaching, or homemaking, will find her physical training invaluable.

Let's swing into action!

Shh! Not so much racket.

Feminine Robin Hoods shoot the breeze.

A ball flies about, driven to the tune of enthusiastic screaming

Miss Ruth Simms, Miss Mary Wheeler, Miss Eva Eddy, Miss Edith Jones, Miss Josephine Foster, and Miss Millicent Sherman are Proviso's sporting ladies.

Many students underestimate the value of physical education. They are inclined to believe that it is a minor phase of their training for life. But the fact that physical education is a subject each student is required to take by state law proves that it plays a major role in education. More and more, women are called upon to perform tasks which necessitate a high degree of physical fitness. This can be obtained only through the right kind of physical exercise and education. With its modern facilities and capable teachers, Proviso equips her girls with the adequate knowledge for living clean, healthy lives.

MAINTENANCE... they keep the fires burning

The maintenance department, headed by superintendent of buildings and grounds R. C. Quandt, has a steady job keeping Proviso clean and attractive.

Maintenance men are hard at work throughout the day keeping the building properly heated and lighted; moreover, they perform countless other jobs such as setting clocks and supplying clean gym towels. Hours after school is dismissed, the maintenance staff is still busy cleaning the corridors and classrooms for a fresh start the next day. Men are on hand when concerts or other gatherings use the school outside regular hours. In the summer, the maintenance men take up paint brushes and redecorate the school.

The activities of the maintenance staff are carried on inconspicuously, in the background; but we recognize that Proviso would be a dismal place without these men.

CAFETERIA . . . we walk out less hungry

Mr. Folan keeps a watchful eye over his hungry flock of students as they impatiently sniff the aroma of the steam counter.

"Two sevens and a five, please"—the candy cashier captivates carefree children.

Provisosites dip straws into milk bottles and unwrap some of Mom's delicacies.

For a change we're on the inside looking out. We're not complaining; it's fun being so close to all that food!

I can taste that malted already. By the way, what flavor is it today?

Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday—we always love a sundae concocted in our cafeteria.

During the four daily lunch periods, students gather in the cheerful bedlam of the cafeteria to buy their meals or to brighten up their homemade lunches with milk, salads, or desserts.

An efficient and amiable staff of women is on hand to serve the food. Cooks skillfully prepare all dishes, including pies and cakes, in a clean, well-equipped kitchen. The cafeteria is under the direction of J. L. Folan, who strolls the aisles, keeping lines in order and smiling a hello to the students.

The cafeteria is a pleasant place to relax for a half hour, eating lunch and talking over the day's events with friends.

CLASSES

Not by books alone—

The vaunted thoughts of other minds—

But by skilled hands and searching eyes

And humble, understanding hearts

We solve the enigma of life.

Books string thoughts on a tedious chain

And teach not half so well

As restless streams

The mystic source and end of all,

The mutability of life,

The flowing of hope unto hope forever.

The passionate challenge of trees

That probe the sky

With ever-reaching hands—

How can we know hope until we see

Their striving after eternity?

Members of the decoration committee convert yards of paper into trimmings for the Mixer.

Senior officers—Carl Radke, treasurer; Sal Seno, vice-president; Evelyn Walden, secretary; and Don Blasius, president—pause in their "piloting" duties to smile.

Prom-enading naturally produces dreamy expressions of contentment.

Here we sit like birds in the wilderness, waiting for our ice cream!

CLASS OF 1947... Seniors look confident

The class of '47 selected as its leaders in the mighty senior year Don Blasius, president; Sal Seno, vice-president; Evelyn Walden, secretary; and Carl Radke, treasurer. A. R. Volk served as faculty advisor for the class. The Senior Senate was composed of one representative from each homeroom. This body planned class activities, took care of routine business, and reported to the student body on senior class matters.

The Tinsel Twirl on December 13, the Mixer on March 21, and the Prom on May 16 were the three major social affairs of the seniors' year. These dances were planned with the aid of Miss Viola Scala, senior social chairman.

The arrival of class rings, the taking of measurements for caps and gowns, and the posing for Provi pictures—all during the autumn—set the seniors to looking ahead toward June. While they had enjoyed their busy high school days, they were eager to experience the Special Service, Class Day, and—graduation.

Their approaching graduation kept them busy

SENIOR PLAY... "Arsenic and Old Lace"

A number of murders occurred in a quaintly Victorian manner on March 25, 27, and 28, when the seniors presented the famous comedy "Arsenic and Old Lace," in the auditorium.

The action of the play revolves around Abby and Martha Brewster, two charming old ladies whose only desire in life is to help poor unfortunates find peace. Their nephew Teddy, imagining himself to be Theodore Roosevelt, digs the Panama Canal in the basement of the house. It is here that the aunts dispose of their gentlemen who have "passed away."

The cast was guided through the painstaking work of rehearsal by the director, Miss Mary Eileen Serak.

FIELD HOUSE... where school days end

The Proviso field house has rapidly gathered tradition during its brief existence. Ten senior classes have gone forth from Proviso with lingering memories of farewell ceremonies held in it. Near the end of each year, the echoes of bouncing basketballs die away; the sight of a carpet of neatly arranged chairs becomes familiar to Provisoites.

Shortly before the chairs appear, the spacious field house blossoms into softly lighted beauty for one night. Couples in formal dress glide through the dreamy atmosphere. This is Promtime; this is the zenith of the upper-classman's social life.

When the Prom is history, when it is just a pressed flower stored in a new album, the senior looks forward to the final week of high school. Almost immediately it is upon him; he soon finds himself attending the Special Service in the field house on Sunday evening.

On Tuesday the seniors meet again for the tradition-filled Class Day exercises. The be-ribboned axe is passed down to the juniors; the class gift is presented; and the secret "Who's Who" names are read. Thursday evening brings the week to a climax with Commencement. Diplomas in hand, the seniors stride out into the world; but in their nostalgic moods they look back and let the memories rise from within the massive walls of the field house.

Youth Speaks for Peace

by

JOAN GITZEL

*For two years have we lived with Peace.
We have seen men bargain for her
As we once saw men die,
And we are glad that today's weapons
Are thoughts and words instead of guns and shells.
We have learned again to love securely,
Unafraid that love is an illusion
Which war will ruthlessly shatter.
We once saw cities fall,
And war machines crack and disintegrate.
But, in the bright dawn of peace,
With hearts and minds renewedly aware,
We have turned again
To the indestructible values of life
For a sure foundation stone
Upon which to rebuild our world.*

*We have been told
That peace means unity and harmony
Throughout the world.
And we have wished with youth's sincerity it could be so.
Then we were heartened when we remembered
How wisely we were fostered in liberty,
How our schools have engendered within us
The component ideals of democracy.
We have learned understanding
That perceives not color of skin,
Nor religious nor racial difference,
But the common heritage of humanity.
We have learned unselfishness,
Charity, and kindness;
Fortitude that cannot know despair;
And the stern, but necessary virtue, discipline.
We have been inspired with faith's vision
That ennobles as it leads through disappointment
To serenity and satisfaction.*

*We know that we are the hope of tomorrow's world,
And we face the challenging future undaunted.
For we have thus been taught
To shape our destiny
With self-reliance strengthened by virtue.
And if, in our sacred endeavor to keep men free
And preserve their hearts in harmony with one another,
We apply the truths, invincible and eternal,
That we have learned to cherish,
Then we shall be at peace.*

CLASS OF 1949... Sophomores look ambitious

The Class of 1949 was led through a successful year by its officers, William Wright, president; Russell Thomas, vice-president; Barbara Hatley, secretary; and Peggy Warren, treasurer; by Mr. Loren Spires, faculty sponsor; and by the Sophomore Cabinet.

Among the social activities was "Autumn Interlude," a party held on the afternoon of November 8, which included dancing, games, a floor show, and movies. On the evening of May 17, the sophomores climaxed their social season with a semi-formal party. Miss Mary West acted as the social chairman.

Because of these gala parties and many other activities, this year will be long remembered by all the students of the sophomore class.

The Sophomore Cabinet not only planned and carried out these activities, but also discussed class problems. At the beginning of the year, one representative was elected to this group from each homeroom.

Proviso's youngest class steps forward

1 is for entity of class.
 9 is for the ninth grade, now attained.
 5 is for the week days they troop to school.
 0—what a wonderful group they make!

The audience is seated . . . the lights are dimmed . . . the curtains are raised . . . and on stage, the freshmen are ready to begin a new production of the four-year epic known as high school life.

The 1950 version of this great play once again has an entirely new cast of characters, numbering nearly one thousand. But, unlike most plays, this one has no leading men and ladies when the curtain goes up. In the opening scene, hundreds of players are wandering about in a huge setting composed principally of corridors and doors. The group of people appears to be utterly disorganized. After the play has progressed beyond the initial confusion, however, the audience can begin to see that many of the freshmen have extensively explored their new environment, and are now becoming established in normal routines. The bewildered expressions are becoming ever fewer as the action continues. The little blue books to which the players constantly referred at first are seldom seen. The freshmen, as well as the audience, are now beginning to discover the identities of the class leaders.

The time of the year is November, according to the program, and the cast of this unique play is starting the process by which the stars will be chosen. Nervous players deliver speeches to the assembled freshmen. The curtain falls on the first scene as the players form lines before the ballot boxes.

Scene II opens, disclosing a messenger tacking up a sign. Audience and cast read the election returns — Louis Augustine, freshman class president; Arnold Anagnostopoulos, vice-president; Mary Lou Whitlock, secretary; and John Millikan, treasurer. Mr. Wilson A. Law, sponsor of the production, appears on stage; he immediately begins to confer with the new stars.

The remainder of the second scene is filled with activity. Developing citizenship is portrayed when a body called the Freshman Advisory Board meets to plan group action; developing social life is shown in a series of "counseling parties," which introduce members of the cast to one another.

At length, Act I ends for the cast of the 1950 production. The curtain falls on confident, eager faces. The players of 1950 are ready for the next act of the high-school adventure.

ACTIVITIES

*Out and around—
Step, glide—
Now, crack the whip!
Balance, glide—
Out and around—
Skim, swerve, and slide.*

*There is wild excitement
In the whir of the blades
And the tinkling, scattered laughter.
There is exhilaration, swift and keen,
In swooping out against the wind,
Striving to slip off the silvery cloak
Of misted snow and frosty air
It flings with a challenge
Over the earth
Oh, skating would be like flying,
But for the clasp of mittened hands
That recalls to pleasant wintry mirth

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY in Proviso

Scholarship, leadership, character, and service are the ideals upon which the Proviso chapter of the National Honor Society of Secondary Schools is founded. The members are chosen on the basis of these qualities.

The society sponsors the N. H. S. College Catalog Library, which endeavors to give the students help in their selection of a college. The group also holds an annual banquet for those students who have achieved scholastic distinction by attaining a place on the honor roll or honorable mention.

The traditional climax of the year is the inspirational service held for the induction of new members. Dr. E. R. Sifert gives an effective address, after which the candlelight portion of the ceremony takes place.

Officers for the year 1946-47 were Tom Gill, president; Audrey Grupe, vice-president; Corrine Silfen, secretary; and Barbara Gosch, treasurer. The faculty sponsor of the society is Miss Ellendore Lampton.

STUDENT COUNCIL . . . for self-government

EXECUTIVE CABINET

Seated: Jerry Fippinger, Don Nordquist, Bill Harder, Dorothy Raasch, Betty Shuga.

The Student Council functions as the student governing organization of the school, helping to guide each person toward better standards of citizenship and leadership.

The executive cabinet, consisting of the ten standing committee chairmen and the three officers, meet weekly to discuss problems of the school. This group, together with the homeroom representatives, play the most important part in the decisions of the Council.

The projects under this year's Student Council included the purchase of a jukebox; the sale of student directories, babushkas, rabbit's foot booster buttons, and activity tickets; the sponsoring of a safety essay contest, the school elections, all pep assemblies, and the Morton homecoming game. The Thanksgiving project, a collection also directed by the Student Council, totaled $422.87 to be used for feeding the starved war victims in Europe.

The homeroom representatives, executive cabinet members, officers, and committee members of the Council climaxed a year of service on March 7 when they gathered at a formal.

Representatives pass Council news along

The homeroom representatives, elected at the beginning of the year, play an important role in activities of the Student Council. They attend the monthly meetings, where all major decisions are made, and then carry back the news to the homerooms. Thus, every student, knowing of the work of the Council, may have a voice in the school's government.

HI-Y. . . for service and clean living

The Hi-Y movement was established "to create, maintain, and extend throughout the school and community high standards of Christian character." More than 225,000 high school youths co-operate to uphold its standards of "clean living, clean speech, clean athletics, and clean scholarship."

Proviso's seven Hi-Y chapters are under the guidance of a faculty board, including Richard L. Daniels, chairman; O. O. Dillner, advisory; Wilson A. Law, Richard C. Gerfen, John S. Oklepek, senior chapters; Hubert A. Pitt and A. E. Judd, junior chapters; Joseph A. Tondryk, sophomore chapter; and W. K. Ewing, freshman chapter. This board works with O. K. Wright, boys' work secretary of the Oak Park Y.M.C.A., with which Proviso is affiliated.

Where do we go from here? Junior homeroom representatives look at college catalogs.

The most distinctive part of the Girls' League monthly events is a tea or chocolate chat. The girls enjoy these affairs after school by dancing to the swing of Bing, nibbling crunchy cookies, and sipping tea or chocolate. Special entertainment is planned for each tea; in the past year square dancing, magic, social hours, quizzes, and fashion shows were featured at the get-togethers. Other activities which the League sponsored the past year were a picnic, a splash party, the Mother-Daughter Banquet, the Fiesta Frolic, and the Junior and Senior Pal Parties. In addition to having fun themselves, members of the League undertake several projects to afford pleasure to others. For example, at Christmas time, they give dolls, toys, and scrap books to needy children at the Cook County Hospital. They also present special programs to entertain the people at the Baptist Old People's Home. The Bow Week project, making bows of blue for the seniors, red for the juniors, yellow for the sophomores, and green for the freshmen, is also sponsored by the League. This organization also co-operates with the Proviso Youth Fellowship each year to make the Boys' and Girls' Conference a success.

Gay activities fill the League calendar

The installation of the new officers in May is among the most beautiful ceremonies that are held on Proviso's stage. The ceremony, which is religious in nature, symbolizes the four flowers in the Girls' League garden: the daisy, the pansy, the rose, and the lily. Each one represents a different characteristic of girls who belong to the League.

Included in the Girls' League are the Big Sisters and the Senior Guard. During the first week of school the Big Sisters help bewildered freshmen to find their rooms; moreover, each girl is an all-around friend and advisor to each person in her freshman homeroom. The Senior Guard girls, outstanding in scholarship, leadership, and service, are of general assistance around the school.

The Girls' League is an important part of Proviso's daily life, and the ideals it promotes, raise the school's standards.

Sophomore homeroom representatives crane their necks to see how tea should be served in style.

"We now present Baby Snooks, Proviso version"—the Baptist Old People's Home is host to the younger generation, but definitely.

These freshmen at a Big Sister party mingle to do something or other. They may be playing musical chairs, forming a Conga line, or even practicing judo—what the activity may be is your guess—but they'll know one another better when it's over.

Personality blossoms in the League garden

The girls in this homeroom have managed to get some boys just a little bit interested in doll clothes.

Senior homeroom representatives are not above playing with dolls for a while.

Bow Week is coming, and plenty of ribbon is on hand; freshman representatives have work to do.

By providing intellectual, social, and spiritual guidance, the Girls' League assists Proviso girls in a three-fold manner.

During the past year, the League was guided by Margie Bloom, president; Lenore Wild, first vice-president; Dolores Pease, second vice-president; Angie Kutrumanes, secretary; and Helen Taggart, treasurer. These officers were assisted by five committees—Service, Art, Social, Program, and Friendship—and a Board of Directors.

The Service Committee make the bows for Bow Week, buys and sells the dolls for the Christmas doll project, and performs general services around the school.

The Art Committee makes fashion drawings for the bulletin boards, draws posters, makes favors, and does other art work as it is needed.

Serving at teas and chocolate chats is one of the main duties of girls on the Social Committee. Sixteen girls are needed at each gathering—four to work in the kitchen, four to pick up dishes, four to replenish the tables, and four to serve at the table. This gives each girl on the committee an opportunity to be of service and have fun at the same time.

The Program Committee is the place for girls who can sing, dance, or do any sort of performing. Everyone on this committee must have the ability to plan good programs for the teas and for the Mother-Daughter Banquet.

The Friendship Committee writes cards and letters to girls who have been out of school for a long period of time. The job of this committee is important because it brings cheer and happiness to the sick girls.

In these ways the Girls' League is able to take an active part in the life of Proviso.

The Proviso Ushers is an important organization in the administration of Proviso. Its members play an important role by ushering at such social functions as the class plays, choir and orchestra concerts, assemblies, and commencement.

The officers who served this year are as follows: Jeannette Allen, president; Melba Jones, vice-president; Charlene Unger, secretary; Bernadine Hurtig, treasurer; Geraldine Hurtig, social chairman; and Carol Ramsey, publicity chairman. Miss Genevieve Krebs and J. W. Bennett are faculty sponsors.

Proviso affords training in journalism by publishing the Pageant, which continues to hold the highest achievement rating awarded to high school newspapers, the International Honor Award by Quill and Scroll.

This year, the staff of the Pageant was headed by Marjorie Hinkle, editor-in-chief, and Jim Davis, managing editor. Carol Ramsey was head copy editor; Bill Menke served as sports editor. The Magazine Section was edited by Nancy Koenig. Associate editors and junior assistants, who came on the staff in February, aided these people.

Long hours, rush work, meticulous attention to details, editing copy, and writing headlines are all familiar duties to the staff whose headquarters is Room 34. Miss Florence I. Otis and R. L. Daniels supervise the proceedings of the young journalists.

R. T. Stickler, sponsor of the business staff, handles all advertisements for the Pageant. The business staff fosters community interest by obtaining ads from various establishments. It also takes care of Pageant circulation and finances.

Many elements are involved in producing the Pageant. The sports section this year has been under the capable management of Bill Menke, who has also served the Maywood Herald in a similar capacity. The clerical staff spends long hours typing other people's copy. The business staff, subdivided into advertising and circulation sections, pays the bills and distributes the papers through lockers or the postoffice. At the beginning of second semester, numerous juniors emerge from the newswriting class and begin to labor over copy-editing and proof-reading. A hush falls over the tense, expectant audience... the house lights slowly dim... the curtain rises... on stage, the actors take their places, and the play begins.

Such is the scene which Proviso Players witness at the semi-monthly meetings held in the Social Room. These meetings not only entertain, but also provide the opportunity for theater-minded juniors and seniors to learn at first-hand the methods of dramatics. Guided by the directors, Miss Serak and Miss Stark, the Players work out their own settings, decide on their costumes and make-up, and staunchly battle at directing and acting.

During the past year, John Cannon, a former member of Proviso Players, spoke about radio as a profession. John, a graduate of the Class of '39, is now a radio announcer on WBBM. Miss Western, Proviso's head librarian, also spoke before the group, giving a talk on her experiences with the American Army in Europe.

The Players climaxed a year of bustling activity with a formal in the Social Room on April 11. This year's officers were Ed Hilko, president; Mary Angaran, vice-president; Helene Kappel, secretary; and Don Regnet, treasurer.

The major project of the Proviso Youth Fellowship is the annual conference, consisting of a series of talks and discussions which stress sincere and wholesome Christian beliefs in the home, in the classroom, and in the church.

This year, "Living Today for Tomorrow" was chosen by the group as the theme of its eighth annual Boys' and Girls' Conference held February 28, March 1-2. Through the ideas exchanged in these discussions Proviso students acquire an intelligent understanding of their responsibilities; thus, they become better prepared to take their places in a world of peace.

The fall picnic, the enlightening forums, the impressive Easter Sunrise Service, held in the high school stadium—all present opportunities for cooperation between the church and the school.

Officers for the 1947 conference were Jeanne Jones and John Martinson, co-chairmen; Wanda Kitterman, secretary; and Dale Johnson, treasurer. Committee chairmen were Mary Elizabeth Anderson, banquet; Sue Wiegman, publicity; and Don Blasius, recreation.

Fellowship activities warm the heart

Mr. Volk, Jeannine Willis, Mr. Catlin, Jeanne Jones, Mrs. Wiegman, and Jerry Snyder are present for discussion at the Youth Fellowship Forum.

Whoops! Don't fill it too full.

Hurry up with that hot chocolate—we're thirsty.

...and then they all gathered 'round the campfire.

The Proviso Youth Fellowship picnic, held in October in Thatcher's Woods, will be long remembered by those who attended. Not only were games played, but also refreshments such as hot dogs, potato chips, and cocoa, were served to delighted picnickers. During the course of the evening, dancing was held in the pavilion. After nightfall, there was singing directed by Mr. Daniels, around the campfire. The crisp autumn air, together with the food, singing, and entertainment, made this an evening of supreme pleasure.

Girls' Athletic Association activities

Freshman girls were acquainted with the G.A.A. at the Pow Wow, the annual freshman playday. The freshies were split into tribes, and each wore the feather of her tribe throughout the day's festivities. These included competitive games of volleyball, baseball, war dances and Indian wrestling. The chiefs and braves then partook of a feast in the lower gym where they were entertained.

Many of the older members of the G.A.A. earned through their service enough points to make them eligible for G.A.A. awards. These included the G.A.A. emblem of Proviso — a "P," and emblem of Illinois — an "I," together with awards given for intra-mural and inter-scholastic participation.

With a resumption of inter-scholastic sports and a renewed interest in intra-murals, the Girls' Athletic Association experienced one of its most successful years. Under the supervision of Miss Eva Eddy, sponsor, Miss Edith Jones, Miss Josephine Foster, Miss Mary Wheeler, Miss Ruth Simms, and Miss Millicent Sherman, fourteen different sports were offered. Three of these, tennis, golf, and archery, were offered for inter-scholastic as well as for intra-mural competition. This gave the more advanced members an opportunity to represent Proviso against girls from other schools.

With an enthusiastic crew to guide its course, the good ship G.A.A. had an enjoyable voyage. The first landing was made at the Indian Hunting Grounds (girls' upper gym) on Saturday, September 28. Here the annual freshman playday, which has assumed the name of the Freshman Pow-Wow for the coming years, was held.

The crew had many other pleasant landings, including a Christmas party, a formal initiation in February, and a splash party and potluck supper the following month. Finally, on May 9, at an installation tea, the senior crew members received permanent shore leave.

Future Business Leaders of America

Club members stop to cast an eye on the photographer before they depart for a field trip.

The Future Business Leaders of America was formed in Proviso to aid in the development of interest in business education. A comparatively new organization, it was first chartered in 1942; however, it has the distinction of being one of the first in the state of Illinois. This organization is not limited to this section of the country, for it holds national conventions.

The purpose of the Future Business Leaders of America is to help students gain commercial experience. Modern office equipment is ever-ready for the club's members. They are encouraged to work for awards in commercial subjects, and are given help in making an intelligent choice in business occupations.

Officers for the year were Bernadine Shepardson, president; Ray Schoenwolf, first vice-president; Myrna Welch, second vice-president; Elizabeth Knox, third vice-president; Nancy Karel, secretary; and Jeanne Swanson, treasurer. The club is under the sponsorship of Robert Stickler.

"Now, don't kick a spectator back if he trips you"—members get instructions for selling candy at basketball games.

Distribution and advertising for the Pageant are handled by the Business Leaders. The office in Room 115 is the headquarters of the staff which spends the sixth period each Friday slipping the newspapers into subscribers' lockers. Another group in the club, trained in ad writing, solicits and prepares the advertisements of local merchants for publication in the Pageant.

Another valuable service of the Business Leaders was started in 1945. Shortly before the Christmas holidays, the club sponsors an after-school course in Christmas sales, which is intended to satisfy better the call of the stores for part-time workers during the holiday rush. The selling course is basic training in proper sales technique for the many students who want to earn extra money during vacation.

Other activities of the Leaders include the selling of candy at basketball games, the securing of speakers and demonstrations, and the sponsoring of field trips to business organizations.

ORCHESTRA . . . "sweet concourse of sound"

In keeping with Proviso tradition, the orchestra again assumed its role as an integral part of the Music Department. Together with the choir and the choruses, the orchestra presented a program of appropriate and pleasant compositions for the Christmas concert. The same musical organizations gave a joint concert in the spring. Besides these, the orchestra also played for the junior and senior plays and the January 30 meeting of the P.T.A. Ensembles and soloists furnished approximately 75-100 programs for organizations in the community.

Relaxing in their busy schedule of musical service, the members held several picnics in the forest preserve at which wieners and baseball were the order of the day. Together with their parents, they also attended the annual showing of the Interlochen film.

Perhaps the orchestra's most important function is the training in sound musicianship which it offers to students. Players participate in the district music contests of the state of Illinois; soloists and ensembles are also entered in these contests. A school award consisting of silver stars mounted on Proviso blue is given to those students who attain sufficiently high musical standards in the course of their high school career; one star is awarded for each year of excellent service.

Members of the string trio were Jerry Snyder, cello; Jack Aurand, violin; Ronald McDonald, piano. Those members who attained special distinction this year were Frank Dinello, Merton Sargent, Donald Schultz, Harold Anson, and Jerry Snyder. Denman Gerstung was the concertmaster; Jack Aurand, the assistant concertmaster. Mr. Wallace Nelson was the director.

With Mr. Robert A. Davis as its new director, the Proviso Choir again delighted the citizens of Maywood and the surrounding villages with many inspiring and entertaining programs. The choir opened the season with a performance at the first meeting of the P. T. A. Next they presented a sacred concert at St. John's Lutheran Church of Maywood. During the holiday season, a Christmas concert was given jointly by the choir and selected members of the various choruses. As in the preceding years, the choir joined the Maywood Festival Chorus in the presentation of Handel's "Messiah," under the direction of R. Lee Osburn. Several other appearances were made in the community, one of them being a program presented for the Maywood Rotary Club.

A newly-organized ensemble this year was the boys' octet. Its members were: Harold Mascarella, Tom Sifert, Herbert Weltler, Philip Stendel, Larry Crail, Paul Lehnhardt, Jim Cromar, Bill Kalfas, and Gordon Miller, accompanist. Choir officers for the year 1946-47 were Ron Whitney, president; Helene Kappel, vice-president; Peggy Meyer, secretary; Lorraine Zimmerman, treasurer; Jean Weis, robe committee chairman; Harold Mascarella, library committee chairman. Those who served the choir as accompanists this year were Jean Shaw, Helen Taggart, and Louise Vollert.

BAND . . . stirring marches and symphonies

This year Proviso's blue and white bandmen maneuvered for four football games, played for four student assemblies, and gave two Sunday concerts. Most applauded of the maneuvers at the games was the star formation, in which majorettes twirled at each of the five star-tips. For their student colleagues, bandmen chose to play Prokofieff's March for "The Love of Three Oranges," Prelude and Wedding March from Wagner's "Lohengrin," Lillya's "Latin-American Fantasy," and the popular "Pavanne," by Morton Gould, at the assemblies. "Phaeton," with new scenic effects by the art department, climaxed these spectacular programs. Scenery was also used at the Sunday afternoon programs. Most striking of these eye-and-ear-appealing programs included the Angels' Stairway scene from "Hansel and Gretel" by Humperdinck.

CINE CLUB . . . CAMERA CLUB

The members of the Cine Club learn the intricacies of the moving-picture projector, and then put the knowledge to use with practical experience. Visual education advances in Proviso largely because of the willing service of the boys who run the projectors for classroom films.

The officers for the year were Richard Stevenson, president; Jerry Haslett, vice-president; Raymond Valenta, treasurer; and Charles Kassel, secretary. The club is ably guided by C. W. Bills, faculty sponsor.

As members of the Camera Club can testify, there is much more to taking candid pictures than clicking a little lever. Under the competent sponsorship of Mr. Harvey Johnson, the camera-loving people learn the secrets of good photography and of the darkroom. Among their activities are developing, enlarging, and gathering valuable pointers for making better pictures.

The officers for the year were Harold E. Sugden, president; Jerry Haslett, vice-president; Beverly Hendin, secretary; and Arthur Boike, treasurer.

Proviso Parent-Teachers' Association

The aim of the Parent-Teachers' Association is to afford an opportunity for parents and teachers to meet and discuss the individual classroom problems of the student.

The first hour of a P.T.A. meeting is allotted for conferences between parents and their children's teachers. The business meeting consists of the distribution of printed committee reports and the presentation of an entertaining program. Following the meeting, refreshments are served in the cafeteria.

The organization sets aside two funds for student use—the Needy Student Fund and the Worthy Student Fund. The first, on the advice of the nurse or counselor, is made available for the purchase of clothing, materials, supplies, and glasses. The counselors are also given five dollars each as a petty cash fund, for temporary loans to students. The Worthy Student Fund is set aside for deserving students who could not finish school without some financial aid.

The successes and benefits derived from this year's projects are due to the direction of Mr. O. Thorsen, president; Mrs. A. C. Boeke, vice-president; Mrs. H. Powell, secretary; Mrs. H. R. Maas, historian; Miss Willa Jean Gray, general treasurer; Mrs. R. E. Poplett, treasurer of the Student Fund; Mrs. Kramer, social chairman; and Mr. Bruhn, program chairman.

VARSITY PIRATES . . . determination plus

Third row: Coach Kassel, Martinson, Hafner, Clary, Riley, Schoenneman, Black, Cofield, Depuydt, Mgr., Coach Puplis.

Lacking sufficient weight, speed, and experience, the 1946 edition of the Proviso Pirates coached by Andy Puplis and Chuck Kassel completed their eight game season with one victory, one tie, and six losses.

It was heartbreaking for the Pirates to see games so near the victory point fade away to their opponents. Despite these weekly losses, the Bucs continued to give their best. The peak of their season came in a brilliant game with Oak Park.

The Blue-and-White opened their 1946 battles with a 0-0 tie with the La Grange Lions. The following Saturday they traveled to Evansville, Indiana where they met Bosse High School and lost, 14-0.

Coming back the following Saturday to play on home grounds for the first time in the season, the Pirates dropped a game, 14-13, to Highland Park.

With renewed determination the Bucs traveled to Harvey to play Thornton and defeated them, 13-0. This was their first and only win of the season.

Back again to home territory, the Pirates faced the Wildkits of Evanston and were defeated, 7-0.

The next game was lost to New Trier, 26-12, on Phelps Field. Undefeated in spirit, the Blue-and-White returned to home grounds and were trounced at the hands of the Morton Mustangs with a final score of 12-0.

In their final game of the year, in spite of a brilliant first half, the Pirates lost to the Huskies of Oak Park, 19-0.

CANDID SHOTS OF PIRATES IN ACTION

A revision of the Four Horsemen — Proviso style — is staged by Ehlert, Hafner, McFeely, and Lenzie.

"Now, this object is called a fooball," Coach Puplis patiently points out to a skeptical Kveton.

LaBerge makes a catch — and we don't mean fish.

Kveton and Mueller are ready to stop whatever comes; that is no triumphal arch for the other team.

1. Sykes gets ready to make a pass.

2. Gorka demonstrates football Ziegfeld style.

3. Mueller (swoon) is the captain of the team.

4. Hughes prepares for combat.

5. Amanti gives the cameraman a fierce look.

7. Bunny waits his chance.

8. Schick watches for the ball.

FRESH-SOPHS... Pirates in apprenticeship

Sporting a hard-fighting, well-rounded squad, the fresh-soph football players won one, lost four, and tied two of their games.

With L. F. Slimmer, H. Dixon, and F. Wrobke as coaches, the curtain-raisers developed into a renowned and respected squad.

Bob Stendel's flashy 78-yard dash in the opener at LaGrange set up their first 6-6 tie. The following week, the Pirates were whitewashed by Highland Park, 20-0, but they came back for their first win, 20-18, at Thornton's expense. After pacing Evanston for the first three quarters, the Blue-and-White finally succumbed to the Evanston Wildkits by a score of 21-14. However, when the underclassmen met New Trier, the Pirates suffered a stinging 21-0 defeat. When the Mortonians visited Proviso, the Mustangs had all they could do to tie the Bucs, 18-18. Oak Park, which claimed many lopsided scores, beat the sophs 25-12 in a hotly contested battle.

The Hatley-Matte aggregation, the Jay-Vees, battled their way to an impressive four-win and four-loss finish of the football season.

They opened their season with Niles varsity and were defeated by a score of 37-6. Not allowing this loss to discourage them, the junior Bucs came back to trounce Leyden, 26-0.

Bloom proved too strong and the Pirates lost, 19-13. The next three were triumphant weeks, for the Hatley-Matte men defeated Evanston, 13-6, New Trier, 20-0, and Morton, 20-7.

The climax of the 1946 season was the thrilling game with the Jay-Vees of Oak Park which the Blue-and-White lost 26-6.

These are the thrills of a football game

1. Mr. Moore and Mr. Immel, our two broadcasters of Proviso's fighting Pirates, sprint down the field for a fifty-yard dash.
2. Difficult decisions — who has the football? The referee trots over to identify the man under the man under the man on top.
3. A few of Proviso's best-sellers pause with heavy-hanging baskets of candy and jingling coin cups. They can smile now; nobody has yelled "Down in front!" for a full five minutes.
4. The camera's eye catches everything from smiles to boredom. The play must be dull in this quarter, judging from the attention the cameraman is getting.
5. This is just like football at the Rose Bowl, huh? Well — almost — at least it's just as exciting.

If you were to go to a football game, you would see crowds of teen-age boys and girls, cheering with all their might. Girls would be in blue jeans, plaid shirts, and bright scarves, and fellows would be in battlejackets and ear muffs trying to keep out as much of the crisp wind as possible. All in all, though, we have to admit that football is a wonderful sport. Don't you agree?

. . . Excitement pulsates in the stands

1. Oo-la-la! What form?
2. Greetings, Gates!
3. Are they fresh? (The chips, we mean.)
4. How's the atmosphere up there?
5. The sextet cheers Proviso on with a "Blue and white, fight, fight!"
6. Let us in on the secret, hmmmmmm?

Football . . . vendors with their shouts of "candy! potato chips!" . . . intense excitement of the crowds during the kickoff . . . a surging feeling of loyalty when the band marches in during the half . . . the enthusiastic response of spectators when the cheerleaders yell . . . Football, 1946 version.

FRESHMAN SQUAD . . . pint-size Pirates

When an eager crowd of boys answered the call for freshman football candidates, Coaches Bryan, Chambers, and Rice had their annual "headache" of whittling down the group to a squad of about seventy. Emphasis was made on fundamentals as the squad was introduced to football in the ensuing weeks.

In their first encounter the Baby Bucs were beaten, 18-7. The following two events were identical in score, the frosh losing to both Evanston and New Trier, 25-0. Finally the Pee wee Pirates retaliated by edging out the Morton Mustangs, 14-13, for their first win. In the final game of the season, the tables again were turned on the frosh as Oak Park overshadowed them, 7-6.

How's the weather up there?

We're ready if you are.

The inexperienced Pirate Varsity cagers, coached by S. O. Storby, fought through their 1946-47 season with some bitter losses, but with unshaken team spirit.

The basketekers opened their season on home grounds by crushing a supposedly strong Maine squad, 44-27, and topping the York Barons, 47-32.

Traveling to Elgin the following week, the Pirates were edged from victory by a close margin of 36-34. Back on local hardwood, the Pirates faced the Huskies of Oak Park and defeated them, 37-31. Then Waukegan, one of the Suburban League's strongest quintets, stopped the Bucs, 40-25, on Waukegan's battlefield.

The Proviso five won the last pre-holiday game from Thornton, 47-36. In the Waukegan tournament on January 1, they placed third. Then the Blue-and-White lost to Highland Park, Evanston, and New Trier. In two spectacular games, Proviso whipped Downers Grove, 48-26, and came close to upsetting the powerful Morton Mustangs, 42-44, in the most brilliant game of the season.

After losing to Oak Park, the Blue Blazers came back to wreck Waukegan's 19-game winning streak with a 41-39 edgeout. Although bowing afterward to Thornton, Evanston, and New Trier in closely contested games, Proviso thoroughly trimmed Highland Park with a record-breaking final count of 73-35.

Coach: V. R. Kent.

The 1946-47 Jay-Vee quintet had a good season. In the inaugural game, the Buc basketeers clipped the Leyden varsity, 35-33. Then Coach Rex Griep's Pirates raided Oak Park, capturing a 36-25 victory. Back again in home territory, the squad trailed Waukegan's junior Bulldogs closely, losing by only one point. In the next few weeks, Proviso swept forward into a series of triumphs, defeating Thornton, 43-34, routing Dundee, 40-31, and walking over Evanston, 42-21. After that the Bucs dropped two games—one to Morton, 39-29, and one to Oak Park, 36-28. They recovered by walloping Thornton, 43-25.

The Fresh-Soph basketball team, curtain-raiser at all Varsity games, was overwhelmed by strong opposition in a poor season. They got off to a promising start by downing Maine, 41-26, but in the next game a lightweight team of experienced juniors and seniors from York defeated the sophs, 30-23. The underclassmen hit bottom when the Oak Park Huskies administered a stinging 42-12 blow. Although most of the following games were losses, the sophs turned in some good performances, as in the close games with Thornton and Highland Park, and the 29-25 victory over Downers Grove.

Enthusiasm for basketball was high among the freshmen this year. 115 boys, an unusually large group, reported to Coach Stanley Rattenbury for basic cage training. To open their season, the 'Baby Bucs' ventured into foreign territory, and were handed a 25-13 defeat by New Trier. The next two scraps, with Oak Park and Waukegan, found Proviso's scoring 35-29 and 38-27 respectively. The Pirates' first win came on home hardwood when they nosed out Thornton, 34-32. Following this, Leyden, Morton, and Evanston rode over the Blue-and-White. With last minute recoveries, Proviso edged Oak Park 32-31 and New Trier 31-30. The final game was won with Thornton, 38-29.

Although many powerful cross-country teams have risen in the state, this year Proviso continued to maintain her enviable record.

Herb Semper, one of the four top runners in the state, breezed through the season, succumbing only to the state champion, and then by only a slim margin.

During the season, the thinclads lost to LaGrange, Schurz, and Maine by close scores. Hitting a winning stride, the harriers outran Bloom, Leyden, Argo, Evanston, and Morton.

The high spot in the season was the Proviso Invitational, in which the Pirates proved to be the best of 15 of the top squads in this area. In the state sectional meet, held here for the first time this year, the Monilaw-men headed by Herb Semper, who finished first, overpowered all but Bloom, which sneaked off with first place honors.

The Fresh-Sophs maintained an undefeated record in dual meets.

SWIM... tank stars break prep records

Featuring two of the finest prep swimmers in the state, the Proviso swim team came through with an outstanding record.

Ed LaBerge, considered one of the best swimmers in the state and the best to come to Proviso, broke six pool records; four were in the fifty-yard free style, one in the forty-yard, and one in the hundred-yard.

Going through the season undefeated until the Suburban League meet, Jim Seegers, backstroke star, stood out as one of the top contenders for the state title.

As a team, the varsity-boys managed to win four and lose seven, competing against some of the toughest competition available. All of the meets were hotly-contested and lost by a slim margin.

The Fresh-Soph mermen won six of their nine meets, the best record in ten years.

WRESTLING... Buc pin-boys stay on top

The wrestling season got under way early in December, when preliminary bouts were staged and training was started. Top positions were filled by a challenge system, in which a wrestler could try to defeat the leader of his weight class, and thus take over a first-string position.

Mr. Slimmer and Mr. Kassel coached the Varsity team; Mr. Puplis was coach of the newly organized fresh-sophs.

Among the leading contenders for the several weight classes were Dean Box at 112 lb., Paul French at 120, Bill Hrebik at 133, Ed Stehle at 138, Bunny Ehlert at 145, Floyd Arvidson at 154, Jim Grady at 165, and Ken Fabry at heavyweight.

The grapplers took their first meet from New Trier, 26-22. They went on to down Rock Island, 19-17, in a tough meet, and to outscore LaGrange, 27-13. Davenport, Iowa champs, fell easily before the Pirate matmen, 25-8; but the Bucs succumbed to Crane Tech power, 19-17, for their first loss. Another defeat by Tilden followed wins from Riverside, 36-8, and from Calumet, 42-0.

Powerful pitchers will be the pride of the 1947 edition of the baseball squad. Dick Janasky, who pitched a no-hit game in the state tournament, promises to be the chief hurler on the staff. Billy Jefferson and Ray Shilkaitis, who have hurled no-hit games, and Ben Hill, who boasts a wicked curve ball, will be up from the frosh-soph squad to back Janasky and Roger Lucas, the two returning veterans.

Behind the plate, Mueller will be back from last year's squad, and Pitra and Jacobs are expected to lend a hand on the receiving duties.

The infield will be much the same as last year's with Blasius at first, Cofield at second, Sampson at short and possibly Agster who alternated with Heinrich of last year's squad. Jack Soderberg, up from the Sophomore squad, is expected to give Cofield and Agster a tough battle for their respective posts.

In the outfield Brown and McFeely are back, and the post vacated by Jim Charlesworth will probably go to either Dick Mueller when he isn't catching or Jack Soderberg if he doesn't take over one of the infield posts.

Batmen in action . . . Golf team ready

The return of many of the boys who went through to the State District semi-final last year, only to be beaten by Morton by a slim one-run margin, appears (as the Provi goes to press) to promise a fine season for Coach D. B. Appleton's varsity pillpounders.

An inexperienced Fresh-Soph team of about 35 players is being organized by Coach Wrobke from the group of nearly two hundred underclassmen which turns out each spring. Elbert, Trantham, and Bevan, promising second-string men from last year, are coming out again. The schedule for the year includes ten games, some of them practice games with freshman players only.

Proviso's golfers, coached by Andy Puplis, are in training for a full spring schedule as the Provi goes to press. The team plans a series of seven league meets, from April 30 through May 27. These will probably be preceded by several warm-up meets, with LaGrange, Riverside, York, and Glenbard. The club-wielders also hope to play in the district meet, the state meet at Champaign, and a league tournament at Highland Park.

Golf meets are held on various nearby courses; the Proviso home meets are played at the Westward Ho club near Northlake.

Orr and McCarrell, returning seniors, average 86 and 88 respectively. A top freshman, Roderick, averaged 83 through last summer.

Back Row: Roderick, Macro, Lechelt, Cameron, Davies, Bendell, McCarrell, Samuelsen, Cuthbertson, Davies, Pacioni, Walter, Kelley.

TENNIS . . . LIFE SAVING . . . in 1947

The nucleus for a good 1947 tennis squad seems, as the Provi goes to press, to be on hand for practice; Coach Bennett is welcoming back a number of such players as Bob Grupe, Paul French, Fred Most, Dave Stewart, and Gordon Brif. In the last two or three seasons, intramural tournaments and other activities have succeeded in popularizing the sport.

Fourth row: Delaney, A. Bertellotti, Domuray, Holan, Zuelke, Theisse, Salo, Manning, Kolstedt, J. Bertellotti, Fox, Becker.

Third row: R. Davies, mgr., Piotter, Poje, Cain, Needy, Barkhaus, Marriott, Liesenfelt, Warnock, Pilz, Wells, Janus, Castle.

Second row: C. Haupt (mgr.), Williams, Quandt, Millikan, Urgo, Kratschmer, Winders, Chmelik, Clark, Curphey, Lukow, Rose, Deacon.

Annually, at the close of the swim season, G. A. Hagen switches from swim mentor to life-saving instructor. During the following weeks the fundamentals of life saving are first taught and then practiced. Age and ability to pass various final examinations determine whether the life guards get the Junior or Senior Life-Saving Certificate.

TRACK . . . cindermen dash into the lead

Third Row: Wolff (Mgr.), Shannon, Semper, Vogel, Black, Johnson, Watts, Coach Griep, Coach Matte.

Back row: Vandergust, Bradford, Schnurstein, Piotter, Karr, Elftman, Beyer, Crown, Marks, Kautz, Eck, J. Crown, Thies.
Third row: Coach Matte, Kolzow, Fenton, Roberts, Forgue, Cantore, Stendel, Hulbert, Samson, Roberson, Graham, Coach Griep.
Second row: Brown (Mgr.), Pepich, Malz, Seno, Sharp, Anderson, Panzer, Heady, Battle, Gillespie, Gunn (Mgr.).

Because of the return of such veterans as Herb Semper and James Brown, and with an up-and-coming track star like Peter Malz, it appears as the Provi goes to press that the Proviso track team should have a successful season.

Herb Semper, cross-country star in the fall, and one of the finest milers in the state during the spring, shouldn't have much trouble this season, since most of his toughest competition graduated last year. If James Brown continues to jump in the 20-foot-and-up bracket this year as he did last year, he should be tops for the Suburban. Also, Jim is one of the best, if not the best, of the hundred-yard and 220-yard dash men in the Suburban League. Since in many of the big events of the year Jim will be limited to two events, Peter Malz, newly discovered dash star, will probably relieve Brown of one of his races to allow him to enter the broad jump.

The Proviso squad as a whole is not expected to top the outstanding record made last year, since the team is not so strong in as many events; but it may cause a few upsets in the big events during the year.

ANOTHER YEAR OF PROVISO LIFE SKIMS BY IN A BUSY WHIRL OF WORK AND PLAY. . .

*Proviso is a friendly place
Where fun and hearty laughter
Fill carefree, happy hours.
Committees, forums,
Proms and picnics,
Games and "meets" and parties,
Assemblies, banquets, teas —
This is the Proviso we remember.*

*Strolls across the courtway
Where the wind coyly "balloons" skirts;
Whispered jokes in history class
With the prof intently listening;
The squealing girl who scared the mouse;
The passing wisecrack in the halls;
Outgrown gym suits and science movies;
Bandied "slaung-uage," harried teachers;
Titters and guffaws,
Shouts and giggles —
This is the Proviso we can't forget.*

THE LONG CAST OF VARIED CHARACTERS, ALL STARRY-EYED, PASSES IN REVIEW

RECALL THE YEAR'S POTPOURRI OF HAPPENINGS

Incoming and outgoing gym classes get into a minor tangle once in a while when the field house bell rings late . . . College Day starts plenty of serious thinking about higher education . . . the end of the school day begins with a trickle of dismissal slips, and then suddenly widens into a torrent which chokes the exits; the halls at 3:30 are a bedlam of crashing lockers and hurrying feet . . . much of the suspense in the senior play comes during the preliminary tryouts — "I hope I get that part!" . . . Proviso is proud of its champion horsewoman . . . Christmas carols and Prom decorations vie for interest . . . you travel at your own risk when the snow packs! . . . Bluebooks come to the rescue again. High school life is a patchwork quilt made of these familiar scenes.

A WORD OR A PICTURE BRINGS BACK MEMORIES

Behind every school dance is a hard-working committee whose members teeter unsteadily on stepladders, fastening decorations to the nearest convenient fixtures . . . assemblies bring forth strong emotions, from hilarious pandemonium to quiet reverence . . . monitors see that things are as they should be in the halls . . . "Pageant's out," and Provisoites scan it eagerly for the week's highlights . . . any member of an English class who has carried in dictionaries will agree that they are weighty . . . studes keep an eagle eye on the bulletin boards, watching for game schedules and lost gadgets . . . botany classes on field trips are glad that plants are well-behaved models for sketching. Proviso has an endless list of things to do or to see.

CALENDAR

SEPTEMBER

Swoosh! Summer ends abruptly, plunging a new batch of unwary freshmen into Proviso . . . the shined-up school is just beginning to absorb them when upperclassmen, renewing old acquaintances, descend on the building . . . something new, the University of Illinois extension, comes in to keep Proviso busy long after high school students have gone home . . . and somewhere there is still room for adult evening school . . . never before have so many people been at work in Proviso! But all this activity does not cut into normal high school life; homeroom representatives are elected . . . activity ticket sales are boosted with a new feature—quick and oh-so-candid identification pictures, taken of every student this month . . . organizations hold their first meetings . . . pep assemblies stir up enthusiasm for the football season. Aside from foods classes, which are waiting for modernized kitchens, and boys' gym groups, which are waiting for remodeled shower rooms, every one is getting into the swing of school life . . . tell that voice which grumbled "grind" to shut up and try some activities!

OCTOBER

The fine autumn weather is not going to waste! Provisoites drop their fifth period work on October 1, and swarm out to the north field to watch the first mail helicopter land . . . the following week, fire horns drive them outside several times . . . that's Fire Prevention Week. The Youth Fellowship launches its program for the year on the second of this month with its annual picnic . . . PYF plans for the year include something new, thought-stirring forums, in addition to familiar events. GAA has already turned imagination loose in staging a "pow-wow" in which freshman girls become whooping Indian squaws for a day. In a more serious mood, freshmen are starting their class election campaigns. The juniors have their first party of the year, "Witches' Waltz," near the end of this month.

NOVEMBER

Provisoites have seen the results of the first grade period . . . so have their parents . . . and PTA has met . . . fond parents, after "conferring" with teachers at the meeting, let themselves be led, gaping, through the halls of learning on conducted tours . . . scholarship medals have been passed out to deserving students . . . now learning is further emphasized in American Education Week, with its posters and speakers, and with its open house, when parents of freshmen come to see classes in a more-or-less normal session. The Student Council says that it finally has enough money for a juke box . . . good! We'll be looking for it. Four delegates from Proviso ventured into Oak Park this month for a peace parley, promoting a strictly friendly rivalry in the traditional football game . . . What? How about the football season? Well—Proviso's chances in basketball don't look bad at the start—do they? Let bygones be bygones . . . Proviso is looking to new activities. The juniors are staging "The Lovely Duckling" this month . . . we've heard that it's good . . . don't we hear that about every class play? After the junior play is presented, about all that's left to do this month is to clean up work for the second grade period, stop for a solemn moment at the Hi-Y Thanksgiving assembly, and rush home to rest . . . gorging, by the way, on turkey and such . . . then only three cheerful weeks are left until it's Christmas!

DECEMBER

This is a bright month inside Proviso . . . the first week, dots of gay color appear everywhere as each Provisoite advertises—or admits—his class rank; it's Bow Week . . . later, red bells dangle from corridor lights . . . and the Hi-Y Christmas tree, with its simple white decorations, glows splendidly under the beams of multi-colored spotlights. Juniors and seniors step out this month into the wintry atmosphere of the first mixer, "Tinsel Twirl." Girls' League members, at their Christmas tea, admire the homeroom dolls . . . it's a dress-up affair for the dolls, who leave afterward to brighten young faces at Cook County Hospital. Another Christmas surprise arrives at Proviso—the "wolf books" are here, only a few days before vacation . . . giving us time to browse through them during the holidays! Before Provisoites leave, they crowd into the auditorium to hear the traditional Christmas music assemblies . . . then, murmuring about the odd ordeal of the hour-and-a-half-long first period, and listening to roaming carolers, they relax in last-day classes . . . and finally they stream from the building, shouting "Merry Christmas" and hoping that 1947 really will be happy.

JANUARY

With an air of "Well, here we go again, Proviso comes back to life after a holiday rest . . . but the school days of 1947 don't begin until January 6; that's plenty of time to recover from the worst effects of New Year's Eve. Provisoites had better feel chipper now . . . they will need some stored-up strength for you-know-what, only a couple of weeks away . . . once more it's time to start studying. Before settling down to the midnight oil routine, however, Pete Proviso is treated to a howling good time . . . cartoonist Milton Caniff, with the aid of a live model, demonstrates how he draws his sultry heroines . . . assemblies were never (pant) like this (pant) in the old days! Speaking of assemblies, the skit to boost Provi sales is being given this month . . . another example of how far ahead the entire yearbook schedule is being pushed. It's only the end of the first semester! Provisoites take a day off to recuperate from eighty-minute exams . . . ceremonial candles flicker again at the Hi-Y formal induction . . . and then everybody starts off into February with a more-or-less clean slate.

CALENDAR

FEBRUARY

Some Provisoites have to make new adjustments as their second-semester programs are switched . . . one new course, the one-day-a-week "Preparation for Marriage," finds immediate popularity with the seniors . . . hygiene notes flutter into the past . . . school looks forward into spring. Winter is still here, however; witness the weird night of lightning, thunder, and snow colored yellow by dust in the air . . . followed by zero weather and more snow, normal this time . . . it's still basketball season, and Proviso turns out to watch the ups and downs of the Pirates. February is quite a month for the auditorium; students forget classes for a few minutes when the Concert Band features Phaeton in music assemblies . . . the patriotic play appeals to youth's love of country . . . and both the juniors and the sophomores present their class assemblies during the month. The Girls' League is busy honoring the girls' mothers at the annual Mother-Daughter banquet, as well as promoting friendship among girls at the Junior Pal Party. There's good listening here at Proviso almost any Sunday this month for whoever comes . . . band, orchestra, and choir are all giving concerts.

MARCH

The new month comes in during a three-day session of challenging discussion, the Youth Fellowship Conference . . . this year the speakers are concentrating on the theme, "Living Today for Tomorrow" . . . any year the Conference is well worth while; it's fun to share intelligent ideas in the friendly Fellowship way. Yes, there are intelligent people in Proviso; look at the size of the group on the stage getting scholarship medals . . . and read the list of members newly elected to National Honor Society. Self-government is growing at school . . . the newly reorganized co-op study halls are expanding steadily . . . teachers in study hall will be an extinct race yet. The cafeteria is working overtime this month for two events . . . the Girls' League chili supper and the Hi-Y Father-Son Banquet. Anybody who wants to buy a second-hand scream of pain can get one in the girls' gym . . . Provisoites stocked up on them just before the tuberculin tests, but the doctor's needle was so painless that nobody needed a shriek. The school's surplus energy is being saved for the two big events of the month . . . junior and senior girls are tracking down boys for the turn-about Mixer . . . and, after countless rehearsals, the Senior Play is ready for production.

APRIL

Ah, it's time to let spring fever run its course for a while . . . Provisoites hear Easter assemblies, and then go to relax in a few precious days of vacation . . . now is the time of the PYF Sunrise Service . . . and also the time when Miss and Mrs. flaunt their finery, on a day traditionally the rainiest of the year. This month the Girls' League presents a style show, weather or not, because it's indoors. The baseball team has considerably more weather worries . . . it wouldn't care to have the opening game rained out again, as happened last year . . . but the Pirate pillpounders will manage to get several games in before the season's up . . . where are the cheering crowds? They may be in the auditorium, sizing up the brave-yet-timid souls who venture out on the barren stage, seeking votes for class offices . . . elections are coming any day now. National Honor Society has induced the cafeteria to open its doors again for the annual banquet, the climax of the NHS year . . . Youth Fellowship is also completing its year's schedule with the third forum, on religion. Climax is indeed in the air, especially for seniors . . . there's only one more month to go!

MAY

The last full month of school is a time for tying up loose ends of the old year, and preparing for the next autumn . . . spring or no spring, the time to catch up on studying is sneaking closer . . . GAA and Girls' League stage their installations before burrowing into the mothballs for summer . . . and all organizations meet again to straighten whatever kinks the current year has put into their affairs. The music of combined Band, Orchestra, and Choir blends well with the May atmosphere at the Music Festival. Starry eyes glisten over flowing formals at the long-dreamed-of Prom . . . on the following night, sophs glide into their first moon-mist . . . an evening dance at last. Provisoites are growing more restless . . . underclassmen are almost ready to jump across the exam-hurdle into summer . . . while seniors begin to twitch with the excitement leading up to graduation . . . Senior Breakfast, Class Day, Commencement . . . then it's all over, and a slightly revised Proviso starts the busy cycle once more.
